

Core|Satellite Investing with First Eagle

Actively Managing Your Core

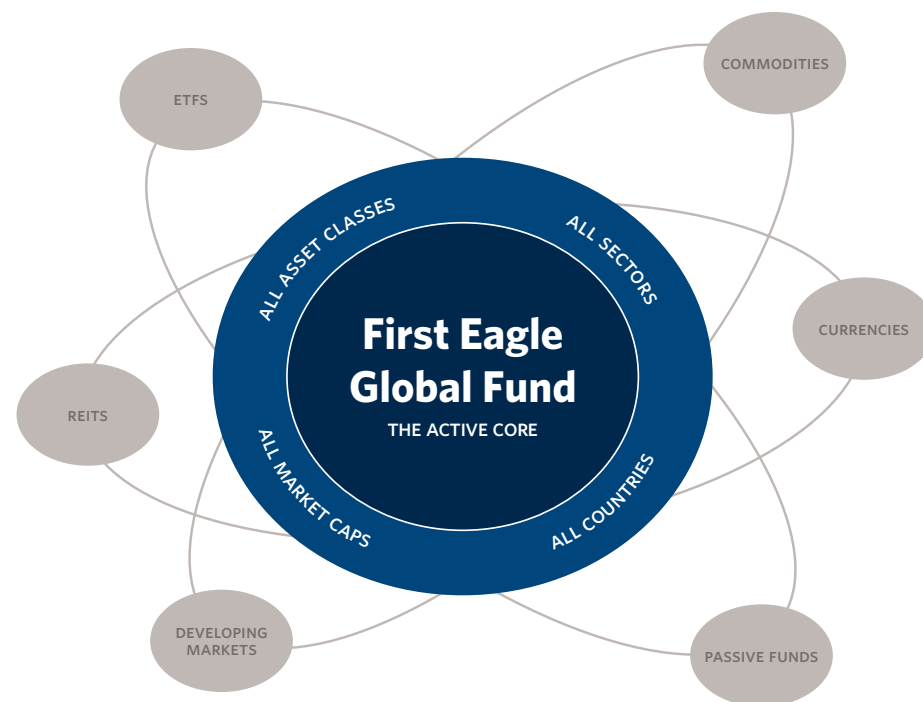

Core|Satellite investing has traditionally been defined as portfolio construction based on pairing passively managed core products with actively managed satellite investments in an effort to outperform the market. At First Eagle we recognize the merits of core|satellite investing, but feel that an actively managed core with the flexibility to go anywhere — any asset class, country, sector or market cap — combined with satellite strategies, could reduce volatility, mitigate downside risk and generate positive absolute returns over time.

In this uncertain world, we recognize that you may want to tactically overweight or underweight specific areas of the market based on the environment in seeking to achieve excess returns. The use of satellite strategies is one way to participate in these pockets of opportunity.

In addition, we feel your core allocation should provide overall stability to your portfolio. It is our view that optimal portfolio construction should be founded on the principle of capital preservation. Your actively managed core should have the potential to provide downside risk protection and avoid permanent impairments of capital over time.

Consider First Eagle Global Fund as part of your actively managed core.

- We have the flexibility to invest across the capital structure, providing a foundation of diversifying asset classes with the opportunity to generate returns above the market, while potentially minimizing volatility.
- The Fund's go-anywhere approach enables investing in a variety of countries, sectors and market capitalizations without constraints from industry benchmarks, creating one of the strongest mutual fund track records in history.
- With capital preservation as a goal, First Eagle applies the prudence required to mitigate risk while attempting to generate positive absolute returns over time and has historically offered downside protection during market bubbles.*

There are risks associated with investing in funds that invest in securities of foreign countries, such as erratic market conditions, economic and political instability and fluctuations in currency exchange rates. Investment in gold and gold related investments present certain risks, and returns on gold related investments have traditionally been more volatile than investments in broader equity or debt markets.
